FELICE LYNE TO SING TOMORROW • NIGHT SONGS QUEEN MARY LIKED

When Felice Lyne sings at the Opera house tomorrow night, the people of Honolulu will have a rare opportunity to hear one of the world's greatest prima donnas while she is still in the glories of her youth.

Among the numbers that Miss Lyne will sing tomorrow night will be the group of songs that Queen Mary had Miss Lyne sing for her in Buckingham palace, a group of songs written especially for Miss Lyne, a beautiful Strauss waltz, the ever fascinating "Hanson Indone" by Rimsky-Korsakov, and many of the same great arias with which Miss Lyne won such tremendous applause from large and fashionable audiences in the great opera houses of London, Paris and Boston.

When the first notes of "Caro

None" float out over the audience tomorrow night, every hearer will realize that he or she is listening to the marvelous voice of the same young prima donna who took London and Boston by storm, was hailed by the great critics of those two cities as a "Twentieth Century Patti" and described by the great Patti herself as "a wonder."

Miss Lyne was received by Queen Liliuokalani yesterday at the queen's home, Washington place. Miss Lyne's party was with the prima donna. During the afternoon Miss Lyne tried "Aloha Oe" and sang for the queen "Robin Adair" and "The Last Rose of Summer." The queen was much interested in Miss Lyne and her musical career.

RACE TRACK AND STOCK MARKET PORTRAYED IN YE LIBERTY FILM

David Higgins, in the title character, brings his audience through all of the vivid realities of the stock market and the race track in his own novel, "His Last Dollar," which is running as a Paramount Feature film at Ye Liberty theater this week.

Joe Braxton, the character played by Higgins, graduates from a newsboy to a race track jockey. Then he goes west and becomes a cowboy. A lucky strike brings him a large fortune and with this he starts for New York city. There Viola Grayson, a society leader, and her mother contrive to assist Braxton in getting rid of his fortune. Braxton is engaged to Miss Grayson, but the latter loves a questionable stock broker, a false friend of Braxton.

The stock broker, Tom Linson, induces the ex-jockey to invest in questionable stocks and then deliberately breaks Braxton on the floor of the stock exchange.

The "trick" is turned a few hours before the horse race in which Mongrel, a horse entered by the daughter of a southern colonel, Eleanor Downs, is to run. Just before the "sell-out" on the stock exchange Braxton has bought Mongrel to save Col. Downs' home from a mortgage foreclosure.

Braxton raises money on his home and bets his last dollar on Mongrel to win against a horse owned by Linson. Braxton's jockey is deliberately beaten up and laid out and at the last minute Braxton mounts the horse himself and wins the race by a neck. The play produces thrills from start to finish. In addition to "His Last Dollar," a Mary Pickford film and a serial of "The Million Dollar Mystery" are shown.

'QUO VADIS' WILL CLOSE BIG RUN

"Quo Vadis," that wonderful play of the days of Nero, when Christians were fed to the lions for the entertainment of the Roman ruler and populace, will close its remarkably successful run in Honolulu tomorrow.

BEVANI SEAT SALE OPENS MONDAY

The seat sale for the season of grand opera at the Bijou theater opens next Monday, April 12, while the Bevani Grand Opera Company will open its engagement April 15. The subscription list now being passed will entitle signers to initial choice of seats and from the success that is being met with in the handling of this list the season of grand opera at popular prices will meet with the hearty support of the music lovers of Honolulu.

In the cast of the Bevani Grand Opera Company Italian and American artists vie with one another for the favor of their audiences. Some of the greatest singers from the grand opera centers of Europe are members of this company while several of the leading voices are possessed by American grand opera stars.

The Bevani company comes to Honolulu after a successful season in California where, in San Francisco, after six weeks at the Alcazar public demand kept the company at the Columbia theater for an additional week and but for previous bookings the stay would have been considerably lengthened.

NELLA WEBB DOESN'T LIMIT ACT

Nella Webb, "song actress," John Barrymore in "The Man from Mexico," a screaming farce and John Bunny in "Pigs Is Pigs," one of the funniest stories ever filmed, make up the bill at the Bijou theater for the present week—a bill that is drawing big and one of the best offerings in local theatricals in some time.

In an echo of the London music halls Miss Webb provides an entertainment that is out of the ordinary. This vivacious little actress has an excellent voice, having firmly established herself in musical comedy and taken a flyer in grand opera, and uses it to the best advantage. Her songs are new to this city, having come direct from London and, incidentally, she never tires of entertaining the length of her act being left entirely to her audience.

The "Two Johns" Bunny and Barrymore are finished comedians and never appeared to better advantage than in their current offerings at the Bijou.

BIRTH REGISTRATION LAW SAID TO BE RETROACTIVE

With the refusal of Miss M. H. Lemon, registrar of the board of health, to record the births of six children yesterday the discovery is made that one of the new laws enacted by the present legislature is retroactive, a rather unusual thing and not generally regarded as good legislation.

This is act 48 of the session laws of 1915, relating to the recording of births, providing that when such are not reported to the board of health within six months after the dates of the births they shall be entered in a separate record and shall not be admissible in evidence as proof of any statement involving the question of birth. Acting on the new statute the registrar has made a separate entry of six births already, which occurred more than six months ago. The effect of the law is that failure to record within the specified period following a birth will by law leave the question of the child's birth in doubt, a serious matter to alien parents who want to prove the American nativity of their offspring.

A breezy newspaper entitled "The Hooker Midget" is being edited and published by the pupils of the Hooker school, South Kona. The paper contains territorial as well as general school news.

GREDA HOLMES IN 'THE CHASM' AT THE EMPIRE

Greda Holmes, an emotional actress, will make her initial appearance at the Empire theater today in the dramatization of the story, "The Chasm." In this picture she scores the greatest triumph in her career. The film version bears all the marks of success that it attained in the original play. A specially selected cast wins fresh laurels in its production. Miss Holmes is assisted by Richard Travers and Bryant Washburn. The play deals with a perplexing problem. A girl marries a man to get money to support another with whom she is really in love. The scenes are well handled and the photography and acting are excellent.

"Molly the Drummer Boy" is dramatized from the popular novel by Harriet Costock. It has to do with the revolutionary period. A fine opportunity is given Viola Dana, in the role of a young girl, to show a spirit of patriotism under the most trying circumstances. Her loyalty wins out and saves many lives. John Sturtevant and Charles Ogle have important parts.

One of the funny Doc Yak pictures will be shown. It represents the inevitable character making good with his relations. The animated sketches are destined to provoke many laughs.

The camera caught the victorious American crew who carried off the laurels at the boat races held in England. Many interesting exhibits are shown at the traffic exposition recently held at San Bernardino, Cal. The landing of a big gun at Panama is a feature of the world's news.
